Cultural Directions

The Gladiolus is a flower of easy culture and does well in any soil, but should be planted in full exposure of the sun. Many of the best varieties produce small bulbs, and in buying a mixture you will find it better when the size of the bulbs varies to a considerable degree. The largest bulbs do not always give the best results. It is essential that the bulb should be of blooming age rather than size. Soil should be well prepared in the early Spring with a good coating of bone meal thoroughly worked into the soil, but fresh stable manure should never be used, unless the ground is to be manured the previous Fall and well worked over in the Spring before planting.

TIME OF PLANTING. The time of planting Dahlias varies according to the locality; whether your spot is sheltered or open.

Plant bulbs in hills or drills, laying flat down, six inches deep. Do not stand bulbs on end.

By planting the bulb first, then covering an inch or so with soil, and applying your Fertilizer, your plant receives the entire benefit of the dressing. The dressing is above the bulb and every rain carries the food down to the roots.

CULTIVATION. Cultivation is the principal requirement of the Dahlia; the most important of all operations to insure success. Keep the soil well cultivated and free from weeds; never allow the soil to crust.

SIZE OF BULBS. The size of the bulbs or tuber does not in any way designate the size or quality of the flowers. Some varieties of Dahlias always produce very small bulbs, while other varieties make large ones. Do not consider small bulbs worthless, for they are equally as good, and in many cases better than the large ones.

All lovers of flowers wish to become better acquainted with the Gladioli. The Flower Grower is your guide, touches all points for the Professional and Amateur. Subscription price, one year $1.50; three years, $3.50. Madison Cooper, Editor, Calcium, N. Y.
